

Bio:

Dr. Scout is the Director of the Network for LGBT Health Equity and an Adjunct Assistant Clinical Professor at Boston University School of Public Health. He is a frequent public speaker and cultural competency trainer who specializes in tobacco, wellness, transgender health, social determinants, health disparities, and surveillance. As Director of the Network, he leads a team that provides a variety of technical assistance for state and federal health policy makers and works to link local LGBT health advocates to each other (follow their activities on their blog, lgbthealthequity.wordpress.com). Dr. Scout has been doing LGBT health policy advocacy for over 10 years. He was the first recipient of the Community Service Award from the National Coalition for LGBT Health, in 2014 he looks forward to a Rockefeller Foundation writing residency in Italy where he'll pen a series of OpEds about transgender health policy. Dr. Scout is an openly transgender father of three teens, as well as a vegetarian and aficionado of bikeshare programs across the U.S.
